Le Chateau de Vimeret.

CARRY was saying: "You left the chateau again last night, after I saw you?—You did not sleep there, you only returned when Celestine came with the eggs and milk from the Mairie?"

George looked down, puzzled and hesitating. "I did not find what I wanted, what I came for last night. Did anyone see me beside your door?"

"No, I believe not, but what then, did you come for, since it was evidently not to see us?" asked Carry, with something of mortification in her tone.

"I had ordered letters to be sent here and I was very anxious to find one."

"And you?"

"No, not the one I wanted."

"So you went away again; and where did you go?"

"Do not question me," he said, interrupting her. "I am in no mood to hear."

"Unkind and selfish," began Carry, warmly.

"How changed you are since—"

"Forgive me, Carry," he said, taking her hand, "but my mind is much harassed. If you know all I wish to say, and dare not, you would not be surprised that I have brought you here to ask you one question. My peace of mind depends on it. It is even in your power to—"

He paused; he pressed her hand within his. She was silent, but her breath came quick, and her heart beat double time.

"Carry, we have been friends since the days when we were children. No one seemed to—"

He stopped. Carry's little hand trembled, but she did not speak.

"Now we have been parted for some time, but I find you unchanged. No, I am wrong; you are dearer to me than ever. I look to you to help me in the path that lies before me. I like my boat, have been sadly beat about by contending waves, and I cannot see my way alone. Carry, will you not consent to be my pilot?"

Again her hand trembled; her head drooped forward, and the gossamer veil fell over her agitated face. She could not master courage to speak, she dare not let him guess the ecstasy of her spirits, as the conviction grew strong in her heart that all her aching fears and doubts were over—that he loved her, that he was asking her to be his wife.

At this moment the General and Adolphe, who had been watching the tête-à-tête from a distance, came forward.

Monsieur Adolphe, who thought the rough-dressed man had enjoyed too much of the company of the "honorable miss," stepped up, and looking significantly at her companion, "hoped she had enjoyed her morning stroll in pleasant society."

George sprang up and brushed quickly by the Frenchman, leaving Carry to her perplexities. But while she was still uncertain what to do or say, the breakfast-bell, which usually rang out a doleful peal, began to clang violently. All the guests at the chateau assembled at the door, headed by the Chateleine dressed most becomingly in white muslin and Valenciennes lace.

"My dear," said she, rushing up to Carry, "the whole town has been carried away in the night. The inhabitants are homeless—asked no, not that, but you understand what I mean. They have lost all, and suffer hunger. We are leaving our breakfast to go to them 'en masse.' General, will you be our guide?" and taking his arm, she and her companion led the way down to La Ferrie.

When they arrived on the shore, they were much amazed to find that all looked as it had done the day before. They stared at the people; the people stared at them, until an old sailor pointed onward, and passing some trees and turning a corner, they came in view of poor Renee's cottage, or at least of what was left of it; and so desolate did the miserable ruins look, that even the hardest-hearted of the party, whom we may safely say was Mrs. Leslie herself, burst into tears, and wept most becomingly; then smoothed her ruffled brow, and looked about her, the picture of woe and wonderment.

"Mais voyez donc," said Adolphe, in a low tone to the General. "There is our friend of la nuit—our pilot. I know he is one, for I heard him say something to Miss Carry just now about being one. See, there he is in the midst of the ruins. What can he be doing, I wonder?"

It was certainly the "pilot." He was evidently looking for something, and was too intent upon his search to notice the arrival of the party from the chateau. But he now apparently succeeded in his object, for he pulled out of a crushed "bureau" a curiously carved box, with initials in silver on the lid. The General called out to him, in an authoritative tone, to come out of that dangerous place, if he did not want to be buried alive. "You seem," he added, with a look at the box, "to care more for your pocket than your life."

But the "honorable pilot" no sooner caught sight of him, as he issued from the ruins, than she rushed at him with a little scream of joy; and, kissing him heartily on both cheeks, introduced him to her friends as her dear nephew—the hero of last night's feat—the young Lord Kinsdale.

This theatrical announcement seemed to be agreeable to no one. M. Adolphe turned yellow, then red, shrugged his shoulders, cast a look of profound disgust around him, and, whispering an adieu to the General, who looked provokingly knowing, walked off like a man who had been ill-treated, and took the first train back to Paris, bearing ever after a decided antipathy to English girls in general, and to Miss Carry in particular.

George seemed almost as much surprised as Adolphe himself, though he did not go off in solitary state. He received the salutation of the company with a constrained air; then turning to Carry, who took the arm he offered, he led her up the path to the Mairie, leaving Mrs. Leslie in an astonishment at his sudden departure. But he had taken Carry with him, so she contented herself with a French excuse to French people:

"Lord Kinsdale is English, therefore he must be eccentric."

Meanwhile George walked on in silence with Carry, looking pale and agitated; and she, remembering their last interview, did not like to be the first to speak. When they came to the Mairie, he took her into and across the wide room.

"Carry," he said, "I owe an explanation to your mother, but you at least must know the truth, and drawing aside the curtains of a little bed which stood in an alcove, he pointed to the beautiful child of poor Renee, who lay there in a deep slumber.

"Look at that poor suffering child. He is to be the future Lord Kinsdale."

Carry stared. There was both consternation and reproach in her voice, as she exclaimed:

"Then—he is your son—and you have been married all these years, and have not told us. Can Renee have been your wife?"

"Good heavens! Carry, how have I led you to imagine such a thing? Surely, you know that I love you, and you only. How could I have married Renee? she was the late Earl's wife, and this is their son. The rightful heir, instead of me. I was informed of this in a letter written to me the day before he died, but which was only lately found among his papers, and sent on to me. His object in going to Scotland was to prepare everything for acknowledging his marriage; but all his plans were frustrated by his sudden death. He had left Renee and his son in the south of France, provided with every comfort, and promising to return shortly; but they heard of him no more. After waiting some months they found their way to St. Valery, to be near her family, who live here at the Mairie."

"And have you the proofs of this marriage?" asked Carry.

"Yes, I only want a few indispensable papers which Renee had with her, and which were in the box I sought for and found just now in the ruins."

"Then you have risked your life, not only to save the child, as I was told by the people down there, but also to secure these papers, which will deprive you of rank and fortune?"

"I lose more than rank and fortune, Carry; I lose you. Your mother would have given you to Lord Kinsdale; she will never allow you to marry your cousin, when he is only George Leslie again."

"Yet when you came to me this morning—"

Carry hesitated.

"Did I not tell you my path was beset with difficulties, and you alone could be my pilot? I must go to England to place all these documents in the hands of our family lawyers. I must relinquish everything I hold most dear. But I could not do this without seeing you—without some token from you that you thought me right. And before I start on my solitary path, let me hear you wish me God speed!"

"O, George," she answered, "all you have decided on is most right, most honorable. But though this morning, when I thought you were Lord Kinsdale, I dared not own how much I loved you, I do, I do. You need not relinquish me, because you are only George Leslie once more. I will be yours wherever you will claim me."

Her words reminded the hope he had put aside forever, and at once broke down his resolution to give her up. With most earnest and devoted love they plighted their troth; and, as words came, came. Still, the time for his departure had arrived; his yacht had to be at sea with the next tide, but before he went he claimed from her one solemn promise—for pity, for justice sake, to guard the child from all harm. For how deeply would his honor be stained if any evil should befall him while under his keeping? The promise was given, and George was gone.

Carry felt her heart bound up in her little charge. For the two following days she was constantly with him. On the morning of the next, the day of his mother's funeral, she went down early, taking him some flowers he had asked for the night before. She found him lying, apparently in a sort of torpor. He took no notice, except to hold out his hands for the flowers, and utter a few broken words. She stayed with him until the family returned from the funeral, and then left him with Celestine, poor Renee's sister. In the evening she went again, and found Celestine had quitted her post by the bed, and had shifted her seat to the fire. The night was cold, and she had felt shivery and chilly after the funeral.

"And the child?" asked Carry.

"O, he had been moaning and murmuring for a long time, something about his mother, and their taking her away. Then he fell into a deep sleep, and so, I think, did I."

"Then stay and warm yourself," said Carry, "I will sit by him for awhile."

She went to the bed, and, putting aside the curtains, advanced her hand gently to feel if the little fellow's head was hot. A terrible ontory startled Celestine. Carry sprang toward her white as death.

"O, Celestine, the child!"

"He is dead, mademoiselle!"

"He is gone!"

She seized a light; a moment's search revealed the fact that he was not in the room. All the doors were fastened except the one which opened out toward the church, by which she had entered.

"The churchyard!" cried Carry, almost with a scream. "He knows all. He has gone there to his mother."

Her woman's instinct was right. The two girls dashed along the path, Carry in obstinate pursuit of Celestine. A woman met her coming from the churchyard.

"Have you seen any one there—a little child?" asked Carry.

"Don't go on, mademoiselle," said the woman. "Renee la belle was buried there to-day, and her ghost is sitting on the new-made grave with flowers in its hand, and moaning most piteously."

"It is no ghost; it is her child," answered Carry, and she flew on, hoping to find the miserable little wanderer. But when she came to the stone stile which opened into the churchyard, the white crosses were all the objects she could see.

"O, mademoiselle," said Celestine, running up. "I have just met the sexton's little daughter, and she says she saw him, and spoke to him, and begged him to go home. But he only cried more bitterly, and said, 'My mother was not in the churchyard, the waters had washed her away. He must find her and lay the flowers in the deep wound in her chest; and he ran on toward the sands. He must have quite lost his senses.'"

"To the sands!" cried Carry. "We must follow him quickly. You run round by the street, and I will go straight on," and she continued her way down to the river side.

There was a light and some sailors near by. "Have you seen a little boy?" she asked, breathlessly.

"Yes, one had come, may be a quarter of an hour before, and had said his mother was waiting for him out on the other side, and he asked them to row him across, and they had done so he wanted."

"He has no mother," said Carry. "I must go to him. Pray, take me across after him."

They did so willingly, but cautioned her not to remain long on the sands, as the tide was coming in.

She had hardly gone many steps when she caught sight of him at some distance from her. He seemed hesitating which way to go; but before she could near him, the sound of the waves which were rolling in with the coming tide struck on his ear.

He turned and fled along the sands with a speed which the growing darkness made it impossible for Carry at once to overtake him. A terrible panic came over her. The sea was on her back, closing in upon her with its relentless tide. She was now among the dissected fragments of land which border the bay, always unsafe, but now channelled in and out with water. She found herself almost surrounded. One way alone was still open: toward firm ground; but on the other side, away where the sea had already invaded the land more rapidly, she saw the white gleaming figure of the poor boy.

Turning from the only path which led to safety, she crossed the dangerous eddies which separated them, and reached the place where he stood. His limbs, paralyzed with cold, could barely support him. He saw her, and stretched out his hands toward her.

"Ma mere, c'est toi?" he whispered, and his cold lips were pressed to hers. She would not undecieve him; it was a moment of ecstasy to him.

But poor Carry felt the sea splashing round them; a moment more and the waves, washing over them, carried them away. Her last effort was to clasp the child to her bosom. The drowning girl could only raise one despairing cry, and the stifling waves closed over her.

But happily, before she sank, one bent upon saving her was close at hand with a small boat and two strong rowers. Guided by her cry he had been able to reach the spot in time to catch her by her white garments, as she floated on the dark waters, and to draw her and her now, alas! lifeless burden, into the boat. The oars glided like lightning through the waters as they bore them back to the town.

George Leslie, on arriving at Dover, had received a hurried note from the Chateleine, saying that, as all her friends were going, she intended to leave St. Valery at once, and would be glad if he would meet her in London.

Not knowing what might happen to the child he had entrusted to Carry if her mother took her away, he thought it best to return immediately and make fresh arrangements; so leaving his yacht at Dover, he re-crossed, and hastened on by train to St. Valery. He had just arrived, and was on his way to Mairie, when he met Celestine full of terror and dismay, from whom he learned all that had happened.

He instantly realized the danger Carry and the child were in. Scattering money and promises, he obtained instant help. And well it was he made no delay, or Carry would have been lost to him forever. As for the little child, the object of so much solicitude, this time he was doomed. All the efforts of the brave girl had failed to save him. The little spirit must have departed with the first wave that washed over them. But her self-devotion was not altogether useless, for her kisses were on his lips, and intense joy was in his heart, and he believed he was with his mother. This must have been his last sensation; and many tears were shed by loving friends as they laid him in the little grave by her side.

Six months after a carriage drove up to Kinsdale Castle; a lady and gentleman got out; they entered quietly and silently. The young wife, for a golden circlet glistened on her left hand, leaned on her husband's arm, who looked down upon her with unspeakable tenderness.

It was George Leslie, whom all now justly recognized as the Earl of Kinsdale, and Carry, his wife. They had been married some few weeks, and were now coming home. But as in their first days of sorrow, so now still a shadow would often pass over their enjoyment. They could not forget "Renee la belle" and her beautiful boy, and their untimely deaths. But no one knew of the secret tie which had bound them to the late Earl. It was no longer necessary to divulge it.

The Chateleine knows but little of what really took place. She declares to her friends that she is almost as well pleased as if she was a Countess herself. She plumes herself on her wonderful sagacity, and says her daughter would never have been one but for her and her fits at the Chateau de Vimeret.

The Campanachicos.—Victor Hugo, in L'Homme qui Rit describes, apparently believing what he describes as perfectly authentic, a gang of wretches: "The Campanachicos, or Campanachicos, were a hideous and not descript association of wanderers, famous in the 17th century, forgotten in the 18th, and unknown in the 19th. Campanachicos, the name as Campanachicos, is a compound Spanish word, signifying child-merchants. The Campanachicos traded in children. They bought them and sold them. They did not steal them. The kidnapping of children is another branch of industry. And what did they make of these children? Monsters. Campanachicos worked on men as the Chinese work on trees. A sort of fantastic stunted thing left in their hands; it was ridiculous and wonderful. They would touch up a little being with such skill that its father could not have known it. Sometimes they left the spine straight and re-made the face. They unmarked a child as one might unmark a pocket-handkerchief. Products, destined for tumbler, but their joints dislocated in a masterly manner—you would have said they had been boned. Thus gymnasts were made. Since we are in China let us remain there a moment to observe a peculiarity. In China, from time immemorial, they have possessed a certain refinement of industry and art. It is the art of moulding a living man. They take a child, two or three years old, and put him in a porcelain vase, more or less grotesque, which is made without top or bottom to allow access for the head or feet. During the day the vase is set upright, and at night is laid down to allow the child to sleep. Thus the child thickens without growing taller, filling up with his compressed flesh and distorted bones the relief in the vase. This development in a bottle continues many years. At a given time it becomes irreparable. When they consider that this is accomplished, and the monster made, they break the vase. The child comes out, and behold, there is a man in the shape of a mug! It was convenient; by ordering dwarf bottles you were able to have it any shape you wished. Campanachicos, allowing for the shade which separates a trade from fanaticism, were analogous to the strangers of India. They lived among themselves in gangs. They were of all countries. Under the names of Campanachicos fraternized English, French, Castilians, Germans and Italians. The Campanachicos were rather a fellowship than a tribe; rather a residuum than a fellowship. It was all the refuse of the universe, having for their trade a crime."

THE REV. DR. H. ADLER.—An interesting discussion is now going on in an important Liverpool paper, the Daily Post, on the subject of conversionist efforts as directed against the Jews. It appears that this journal alluded in extremely favorable terms to the remarkably clever series of sermons published by the Rev. Dr. Herman Adler, in which he annihilated the untenable "logos" of the Christological interpreters of the Scripture. The Rev. Dr. Lowe, a Christian minister, assailed from the pulpit this article and the book with which dealt, and used rather violent terms, with which he endeavored to refute Dr. H. Adler; but he failed to substantiate his arguments.

The Rev. Dr. H. Adler, in a most powerful and exhaustive letter, published in the Daily Post, admirably and conclusively replied to Dr. Lowe, and exposed the machinations of the conversionists, and the motives of those who are said to be converted. He wound up his excellent expose by showing the error into which Dr. Lowe had fallen, by quoting Dr. Delitzsch as a sample of a converted Jew. This eminent scholar happens to be a born Christian.

The Rev. J. Prag, minister of the Old Hebrew Congregation, as well as a writer signing "A Jew," have also published remarkably forcible letters in the Daily Post. Mr. Prag refers to the rebaptizing of the "converted" Jews, and to their begging for Passover bread after their "conversion." "A Jew" ridicules the silly charge of Jewish persecution of converts, and the whole of his letter is logically conclusive against Dr. Lowe.

We request the Rev. Dr. Lowe to favor us with the names and addresses of the "6,000 converted Jews in London," including the "hundred converted Church of England clergymen." We have been of opinion that a strict regard to truth is an essential consideration in a Christian pulpit. Has Dr. Lowe been himself deceived, or did that pious clergyman make a mistake and thus quite innocently offer statements of a highly fanciful character?

AMERICAN BRANDIES THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

$500,000 Invested in the Manufacture of a Pure Article, in California, California.

Wine maketh glad the heart of man when it is good and he don't drink too much of it. But the difficulty is in getting good wine, or wine that is at all fit to drink. The villainous French decoctions are an insult to the human stomach; and under pretense of exhilaration they poison it. We once heard Mr. Beecher beseech his hearers never to touch the villainous compound; exhorting them to drink larger and hundred times soberly.

These remarks apply equally to the brandies of commerce. There is no such thing as French brandy to be bought in the American hotels. It is now ten years since we have tasted a drop of the genuine article, and the labelled "French Brandies" are all humbug.

There is a remedy, however, both for wines and brandies in our own country. We have drunk California wines fit to be the ambrosia of the gods, and the only brandy worth drinking in sickness or in health is the "California Cognac," manufactured in California. We speak from "experimental knowledge" when we declare that there is nothing but age wanting to make this brandy equal to the finest French brandy; and we hear that as the California brandies have "grown older" they have fully supplied that essential need, and may now challenge any brandy in the world for strength, virtue, and aroma. For our own part, we prefer it to all others. It is a perfectly pure and wholesome article, and is not doctored like the foreign brandies; so that no one need be afraid of drinking it.

The "California Cognac" is grown about sixty miles from San Francisco, in Napa Valley, and the finest grapes in the world are raised here. Mr. Samuel Brannan has built a large distillery at Calistoga, and a first class hotel, and there is a railroad running to it, connecting with the Central Pacific, by which the large supply of grapes needed for the distillery are brought into town. To feed the vineyards with desirable fruit, Mr. Brannan has visited Europe and picked the choicest vines from the gardens of France, Germany, Spain and Hungary. One great superiority of this brandy over all others is, that it is made direct from the pure wine of the grape. No pressure is applied as in most other brandies—even those called the best—and therefore, there is no tang or taint to the liquor from the husks and stones, but it is choicely good.

Mr. Brannan intends to devote his time, talent and capital to this in connection with his other business, and employs the most skillful men he could find in the old grape growing countries in his distillery. He knows that he can and does make as good brandy as any in existence, and he means to continue doing it. St. Brannan & Co., of 66 Broad street, have a large stock on hand, which we advise all who need brandy—and who does not, especially in cases of sickness—to call and buy his brands. There is no finer or purer article sold for medicinal purposes in any market. If the brandy is found impure, they refund the money.

MERCHANT TAILORING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

With all due courtesy to our competitors in this branch of business, we desire to announce to our old customers and the public at large that we are now prepared to make to order in San Francisco present Eastern styles of gentlemen's wearing apparel in a style superior and on terms as low as those of any of the first-class tailors of San Francisco, (in this branch we shall not attempt to compete with second-class work, as we show garments in ready-made stock whose merits, in comparison with this class, are at once apparent to everyone.) Our reasons for making this announcement are that we have just secured the services of Mr. J. Burr, of Philadelphia, whose reputation as a cutter for fashionable trade is unequalled by that of any cutter in this State, although this and will be a serious item of expense we are able to more than counterbalance it by our advantages in obtaining New York styles pieces goods on better terms than any Merchant Tailor in this city, the head of our house residing in New York and being constantly in the market. As a proof of our assertion we call attention to our present stock of fancy cassimeres, duplicates of which cannot be obtained in any house in this city, our customers having the satisfaction of knowing that their goods are not only perfectly out and in the mode, but that the pattern is not common and for sale by every bawling shop that may choose to attempt to make garments to measure. C. O. Hastings & Co., corner of Montgomery and Sutter Streets, San Francisco.

PASSENGERS FOR HOLIDAYS.—Passing by the store of Thos. Houseworth & Co., 317 California street, we were attracted by the splendid display in the show windows of California views, (which would make very acceptable presents to Eastern or European friends), splendid opera glasses, and other optical goods, which, on inquiry, we found were sold at greatly reduced rates. Ladies, if you walk along Montgomery street, don't fail to drop in the store No. 317.

PASSING BY THE CORNER OF KEARNEY AND SUTTER STREETS, we noticed an immense crowd, and on inquiring, found that all were anxious to enter Simon's "One Dollar Store," and secure some of the many articles for sale there for one dollar, which could not be had at any other store in the city for three or four times that sum. Goods are received daily by Mr. Simon, from Europe, via New York and the Overland Railroad.

WHITE MEN, AT GOOD WAGES, are employed by J. A. Shaber, manufacturer and dealer in furniture and bedding, No. 707 Market street, and he sells his goods cheaper for cash than any other dealer. Get a nice parlor or bedroom set for New Year's.

FOR AN IRRITATED THROAT, Cough or Cold, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are offered with the fullest confidence in their efficacy. They have been thoroughly tested, and maintain the good reputation they have justly acquired. As there are imitations, be sure to obtain the genuine.

AMERICAN WATCH. J. W. Tucker & Co. are our agents in San Francisco for the sale of our gold and silver watches; any orders sent to them, will be filled with dispatch, and as reasonable as though sent direct to us. Robbins, Appleton & Co.

The newly-opened St. James Saloon, No. 24 Montgomery street, keeps only the choicest kinds of wines and liquors.

Kosher meat of all kinds and best qualities, can be found at the Eighth Ward Market, 329 Geary street.

THE HEBREW W.

THE SUMMIT REACHED AT LAST!
IT HAS LONG BEEN A DESIDERATUM WITH A large portion of the public to obtain a pure, and palatable beverage, invigorating and healthful in its effects, and which, while embracing all the elements of a popular beverage, should contain little or no alcoholic properties as to make it a desirable acquisition to Ladies, Invalids, and persons not accustomed to the use of alcoholic stimulants. The proprietors of Dr. Henley's Tonic Wine Grape-root Bitters, cognized by the wonderful success of that celebrated preparation, take pleasure in offering to the public another article, which they are confident will meet with very general favor.

DR. HENLEY'S
SPICED WINE
BITTERS.

These Bitters are carefully prepared from the choicest Wines of California, and the Richest Spices the world affords; they act on the general system; purify the blood; remove the digestive organs, invigorate their action, and restore their natural tone and power; they stimulate the secretory powers of the liver, regulate the functions of the bowels, give buoyancy to the animal spirit, elasticity to the body, and health and vigor to the general constitution.

As we are engaged solely in the manufacture of BIT-TERS, we have superior facilities, and can supply the Trade with a better and cheaper quality than any other House on this Coast. Our Bitters are for sale at all reputable Bars and Groceries. Consumers should not be imposed upon by cheap imitations, but demand the genuine article.

FLORENCE.

HAVING THE

ING SHUTTLE TEN-SION.
When you buy a Sewing Machine
select one that will cost you nothing for repairs—one not likely to get out of order. The Best is the Cheapest.
Never before, since the introduction of Sewing Machines, has there been a triumph like that of the FLORENCE. Its universal success everywhere establishes beyond cavil its superiority.
Though ten years younger than most of the well-known Machines the FLORENCE has eclipsed them all as a public favorite, and stands to-day without a rival as

The Best and Most Reliable
FAMILY SEWING MACHINE
IN THE WORLD.
It comprises all the good points, and combines all that is valuable in the whole of them, besides which it has many important advantages possessed by no other Machine. It seldom gets out of order, and no purchas-

If there is one within a thou-ing well, if informed of it, I will fix it for nothing and pay all the express charges.

usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sedi-

Its occasional use will prevent the hair

A TIMELY WARNING TO THE SICK.

It is especially important at this time, when the markets of the United States are flooded with the cheap, inferior, and often adulterated liquors, and when domestic compounds purporting to be medicinal, but not a whit less pernicious, are heralded to the world as "sovereign remedies," that the public should fully understand the facts. Be it known, then, that while all the diffusive stimulents called "liquors" are impure, and all the "tonics" containing alcohol are manufactured with a dery article containing amyl or fusil oil, a mortal poison, HOSSETT'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS contain none of these things, but are a combination of pure essence of Rye with the pure juices of the most valuable stomachic, anti-bilious and aperient herbs and plants, and that as a safe and rapid remedy for Dyspepsia and all its kindred complaints, this preparation stands before the world without a rival or competitor. Its sales to-day are equal to the combined sales of all the other tonics advertised in the United States, and the certificates which authenticate its usefulness are signed by individuals of the highest standing in every professional calling and walk of life. Beware of imitations and impostors.

PAIN KILLER.

After a thorough trial by innumerable living witnesses, has proved itself the medicine of the age. It is an internal and external remedy. One positive proof of its efficacy is that its sales have constantly increased, and wholly upon its own merits. The effect of the Pain Killer upon the patient when taken internally, in case of Cold, Cough, Bowel Complaints, Cholera, Dysentery, and other affections of the system, has been truly wonderful, and has won for it a name among medical preparations that never can be forgotten. Its success in removing pain, as an external remedy, in cases of Burns, Bruises, Sore, Sprains, Cuts, Stings of insects, and other causes of suffering, has secured for it such a host of testimony, as an almost infallible remedy, that it will be handed down to posterity as one of the greatest medical discoveries of the 19th century.

American watches in 18 karat gold cases, of every size and style, for sale by the agents of the American Watch Co. J. W. Tucker & Co.

"I say, Fred, this 'cold snap' beats anything I have seen here since '50; but Lord! how cold it was when I was East; and that makes me think of skating, and sleigh rides with a little hugging under the buffalo robe. How would you enjoy a ride to the 'Cliff' one of these bracing and frosty nights?"

"Why, George Augustus, I'm afraid your bells would not chime—or rather jingle. For my part I prefer spending a quiet evening with my friends in my own room. I ordered a demi-john of Scotch whisky, from Schreiber, and last night we had three or four fine hot punch-balls, all right in our own room. Come up some night when you feel like it, and have a game of whist, and I will surprise you with the quality of my liquors and wines."

"Where is Schreiber's, you speak of?"

"Have you not been to the City Sample Rooms, N. E. corner of Third and Mission streets?"

Attention.—If you want a good fitting pair of boots or shoes made to order, at liberal prices, go to Beez & de Longe, No. 315 Bush street. These gentlemen will give to everybody satisfaction, and guarantee for their work.

WITHIN REACH OF ALL.—We have seen many splendid photographs, but none to excel those taken by Mr. W. H. Cook, No. 28 Third street. The only wonders is, that he can execute such beautiful pictures at the low price he charges.

NEW BELLA UNION THEATRE.—First class minstrel performances, dances, songs, gymnastics, etc., nightly all this theatre with a delighted audience.

Diamonds, the largest in the city, and the largest assortment, will dispose of them at a small advance on importers' prices; and we import them ourselves. J. W. Tucker & Co.

I. X. L. Bitters are all the rage. SHAMEFUL ARE THE WAYS OF QUACKS.—An examination of one of the articles offered to the Ladies for beautifying the complexion, said examination being prompted by the statement of a lady that, "using it had made her teeth seem loose," disclosed the fact that it contained a large quantity of a mercurial salt which had probably salivated her. There seems no law to such such quackery; manufactured by quacks of the first water, made to sell by skillful advertising, and the fraud and stupidity of dealers in drugs and perfumery who recommend an article they can make the most profit out of, the ladies are cautioned to use only such articles for the complexion as they may be certain are manufactured by some known expert, like the "Crema de Lis," manufactured by Dickey, Pioneer Apothecary.

Charles Brown, No. 723 Market street, sells all kinds of ranges, stoves and tinware cheaper than any other house in the city.

When we say that we have more fine gold chains than can be found in the balance of the city, we don't think we say too much. Call and see them, J. W. Tucker & Co.

New styles and patterns of silver ware at fair prices. We don't expect to make a fortune on any one article; call and see them. J. W. Tucker & Co.

Alle Dientigen, welche gute und billige Festgefachte machen wollen, sollten dieselben bei Ban. Meyer u. Geyling, No. 35 Second Str. gegenüber Seife Str. kaufen.

Spieleisen.—Weihnachten rückt heran und es ist von großer Wichtigkeit zu wissen, wo man billige Spieleisen kaufen kann. Die S. S. Feldbusch u. Co., Engros Geschäft 306 u. 308 Batterystr., Detailgeschäft No. 307 Montgomerystr., haben ein immenses Lager derselben vorräthig.

Fenilleton.

Der letzte Makkabäer.

Historischer Roman.

Aus den Papieren eines Verstorbenen.

(Fortsetzung.)

Das gläubige Vertrauen schien wie von einem Wunder belohnt zu werden; in der Dunkelheit, die nach und nach über der Erdoberfläche sich gebildet hatte, wogte und waltete es gleich dem Brodel tosenden Wassers und wie gefundene Bilder von reizenden Gärten, von Gewässern, Städten, Wäldern und Fluren wechselten mit Zauberschilden vor den Blicken der fast Halb-entseelten. Der Lebensmuth wurde auf's Neue angefaßt und mit dem Muth die feuchte auch die Kraft zurück; selbst die Thiere schienen dieses Schauspiel zu empfinden. Eine in dieses Gewimmel von Reizen des Erdenasins! war Ben Thurs erster Gedanke, und sterben im Genuß ist süßer, als im Dornen! der zweite. Sein Beispiel feuerte die Andern an; aber wie auch Hof und Kameel ausgreifen machten, die schönen Bilder entwichen weiter und weiter—athemlos hielt Ben Thurs plötzlich vor einem Abgrunde.

Raum wagte er, in den dunkelsten Kessel, der vor ihm gähnte, den scheuen Blick zu werfen; sein Kopf aber streckte den Kopf weit vor, die Nüstern weiteten sich und in langen Zügen schlürfte es die erquickende Luft aus der Tiefe. Ben Thurs ahnete, was dem Thiere der Instinkt zutrug — sein Ruf lockte die Freunde an und man erkannte, daß dieser Grund die von der bezeichnete Ruhe-stätte sei.

Bei näherer Prüfung stellte sich heraus, daß schon vor Jahrhunderten vielleicht ein Erdbeben diesen Thalgrund in der Wüste gebildet haben mußte; denn überall war der Rand geradezu abgerissen, und nur das von oben herabgefallene Erdgerölle hatte eine mäßige Abwärtung zuwege gebracht; man konnte über sie hinuntersteigen. Die Tiefe war nach den Wipfeln der aus dem Grunde emporragenden Bäume mit ziemlicher Genauigkeit zu ermessen und mochte über hundert Spannen betragen. Da eine Ueberfülle an Wasser drunten vorhanden war, bezeugte das üppige Grün der Bäume und ein dumpfes Rauschen, das bis zum Rande heraufdrang. Aber eine nicht geringe Vorsicht drängte sich den Reisenden auf; war nicht etwa dieser Thalgrund der Sammelplatz der die Wüste durchstreifenden Bestien? Wo sollten sie ihren Durst löschen, wenn nicht hier? Die von den Mähligkeiten der Reise niedergedrückten Thiere wurden von der Nähe eines Labetrunkes neubelebt und drängten sich zu dem Rande des Abfalles. Mählig ließ Rachel sich vernehmen.

Ihr Männer, was steht Ihr da und überleget noch? Treibet eines von den Köpfen hinab. Sind wilde Thiere drunten, so wird der Lärm des Kampfs uns warnen, wenn nicht, so kommt das Pferd, wenn es getrunken, zu den Andern zurück.

Die Männer verwunderten sich ob der Rede der Jungfrau; aber sie folgten Mählig. Ein Pferd wurde hinabgetrieben, Alles blieb still, und nach Verlauf weniger Minuten verlorbete ein freudiges Wiehern im Thalgrunde den oben geliebten Pferden den fühligen Boden. Sie waren nicht mehr zu halten. Ihnen folgten die Kameele, dann die Männer und Frauen.

Ein wunderbarer Anblick erschloß sich ihren Augen! War's etwa Lufthung? Raum wollte man den eigenen Blicken trauen, denn ein reizender Garten hatte die Ermüdeten aufgenommen, ein Garten, so schattig und süß duftend, daß man in ein Eden sich versetzt wähnte. Nicht nur kühlender Trunk war in Fülle vorhanden, auch Früchte edlerer Art beschwerten die Zweige der Bäume — in jedem Herzen rief es: Hier ist gut sein, hier laßt uns Hütten bauen.

Der langersehnten Nachtruhe war ein liebliches Gespräch vorangegangen; beglückt wie seit lange nicht verlassenen Thiere und Menschen in den stürkenden Schlummer.

Mitternacht war vorüber, als über den Haupten der Schlüfer das tödtliche Wetter sich zusammenzog. Ein starker Regenguss, der die Kühle der Nacht zum Zuge durch die Wüste gewährt, war unerbärlar der Stätte gesehet. Häuten die Fühlflinge eine Ahnung von dieser Gefahr gehabt, sie würden eher mit Tigern und Löwen gestritten haben, denn mit diesem Feindeshaufen, den Chairotas führte, der listigste von Kal-litides Freunden.

Was kommen mußte, kam: die Feinde schritten sich ebenfalls nach einem wasserhaltigen Ruheplatze und, besser bewaffnet, drangen sie hinab. Schred auf der einen, Ueberrachung auf der andern Seite, waren die Frucht der nächsten Minuten — da half kein Widerstand: Saif Ben Thurs und Alle, die bei ihm waren, wurden gefangen.

Was bietet Du für Deir und dieser Männer Leben? fragte Chairotas den unglücklichen Gatten und Vater.

Alles, was ich habe sei Dein, wenn Du uns Alle ziehen lässest.

Ich sprach von Dir und den Männern. Mein Leben ist mir zur Last, wenn ich Weib und Kind verliere.

Vom Verlieren ist nicht die Rede! Ich dachte, wenn jüdische Weiber unsere Weiber werden, solltet Ihr's als einen Gewinn rechnen.

Darauf habe ich nichts zu sagen; ich bin Dein Gefangener, enthalte mich also der Wahrheit.

Der Wahrheit in Deinem Sinne — und das ist eine trüglische? fragte Chairotas.

Mag sie eine trüglische sein, Herr; aber wer überzeugt Dich, daß die Wahrheit in Deinem Sinne eine trüglische ist?

Wer? wer? fuhr Chairotas auf; ich bin davon überzeugt! Was will der Jude mehr als daß ich sage: ich will davon überzeugt sein! Wir werden Euch das Fragen so vertheidigen, daß Euer Muth am ersten Laut erwürgt! Genug der Worte! Weiber lassen wir nicht ziehen und Euch Männer verkaufen wir als Sklaven. Die Wahrheit wird Dir eine untrüglische erscheinen. — Auf denn! rief er den Seinen zu, nehmt die zwei stärksten Kameele; die Jungfrauen soll das eine tragen, das andere das Weib und mich!

Zu Deinen Füßen, Herr! freisetzte Ben Thurs.

Es ist der Platz, wohin Du gehörst, entgegnete Chairotas, mit verächtlichem Blick auf ihn herabschauend.

Freiwillig flog Rachel herzu; sie hatte mit angestrebter Kraft den Händen der Männer sich entzogen: Herr, setzete sie, Herr, Deine Stimme tönt mir gleich süßem dem Liebeswort ins Ohr! Du mein Retter aus Juden Händen!

Was!

Sie haben mich mitgeschleppt, Aegypten ist mein Vaterland!

Des Hauptmanns Blick sogen sich fest und fester an Rachel's reizendem Antlitze.

Bei den Göttern — Du bist eine schöne Magd!

Habe ich Gnade gefunden vor Deinen Augen, so laß auch mich gestehen, was ich für Dich empfinde! Du, Du bist es — mein Herz bellt mich nicht — Du bist der Stern meines Lebens.

Verworfen! grimmte Saif Ben Thurs, ist das der Dank?

Dank? — Entführer, Du willst noch Dank? Herr, bei Deinen Göttern, die auch die meinen werden, beschwöre ich Dich, laß mich den Juden nicht zur Beute!

Du bist mein! entsetzte Chairotas, beim Gott der Hölle, den streckt dies Eisen nieder, wer mit einem Hauch ein Anrecht an Dir willst!

Er hatte Rachel an sein Herz gepreßt; sie schauete ihm mit feuchtem Blick ins Auge und mit sanfter Hand entführte sie den Dolch der Feindin.

Laß mir, geliebter Freund, die Wonne, des Juden Herzbild diesem Grund zur Abzug hinzugeben!

Du bist meiner würdig, tödtete ihn! Aber der Gedanke erlachte an der Schnelle, mit welcher Rachel das spitze Eisen in des Griechen Brust gesenkt hatte.

Aufgeschreckt von der blutigen That, griffen die Krieger zu den Waffen; Rachel's jugendliche Gestalt, ihre Schönheit, das von Selbstbewußtsein strahlende Auge und der vom Blute des Führers noch rauchende Stahl in ihrer Hand schreckten die Wortsüchtigen zurück. Die Juden hatten sich zu der Hölle hinab geflüchtet, eine innere Stimme sagte ihnen, daß sie nur da dem sichern Tode entgingen. Aber einige von den Kriegsknechten, den Werth der Beute kennend, bemühtigten sich der edlen Waise, und von ihren Gefährten gegen Ben Thurs Anfälle geschützt, schleppten sie die Unglückliche davon. Das Alles war das Werk weniger Minuten, und der Hülferruf der Entführten rief nicht allein die Juden zum Kampfe für ihre Befreiung auf, sondern die Feinde selbst vergaßen der schönen Jungfrau und das Gemetzel nahm seinen Anfang.

Die Verzeiung der Juden entlachte sich mit Eifer, eines jeden Leben wurde zu unnützig hohem Preise verkauft, purpurn farbte sich der Boden und das Gewässer.

Pflichtig sanken die Schwerter — sie sanken lag gleich dem Arme des tödtlich Getroffenen, denn von droben hernieder donnerte des Makkabäer's Feldruf: „Von Gott der Sieg!“ und auf Windbrauschschwingen fuhr Judas, der Feldeshofn des Matathias, todtbringend auf die Feinde herab.

Sechstes Capitel.

Kurz, aber entscheidend war der Kampf, den der Held Judas mit Chairotas's Schaar begonnen hatte; nicht einer derselben blieb am Leben, und die böse Kunde nach Jerusalem tragen zu können. Aber die Juden priesen ihren Gott für den Sieg und nachten sich zur Verfolgung des Entführers auf. Das war eitles Trachten, und schon am Abend desselben Tages näherte sich Judas, dessen Schaar gleich der Lawine wuchs, der Wüste, welcher die Tyrannen und Abtrünnigen den Namen Bachopolis beigelegt hatten. Nicht allein die Stadt wollte er mit Feuer jernichten, die Feinde durch das Schwert vertilgen und die heidnischen Altäre stürzen, sondern der geraubten Waise sollte damit ein würdiges Grabmal gegeben werden; denn Saif Ben Thurs brannte vor Begier, seine Rache zu kühlen. Hinter den Bergen, die Bachopolis in einem weiten Kreise umgaben, lagerte sich das kampfbegierigste Heer, um unter dem Schutze der Nacht die Wüste zu berennen. Inmitten der Schaar befanden sich Judas, Ben Thurs, Laia, und Rachel, deren That mit glühenden Farben dem Makkabäer beschrieben worden war. Auf den Befehl des Führers überließen die Juden sich dem erquickenden Schlummer; aber er selbst blieb wach, um jeder Gefahr, die ihnen etwa nahen könnte, zuerst zu begegnen. Auch Ben Thurs, dessen Herz beinahe dem Jammer erlag, und Laia, die einzigen Reichtum noch, nahm der Schlummer sanft in die Arme; kein Auge stand offen, als das Auge des Feldherrn und das der klugen Rachel.

Der Abend sank hernieder, begann Judas, als seine Getreuen stürkt der milde Schlummer zur nächtlichen Arbeit. Wohl sind sie der Stärkung bedürftig, denn es wird blutig tagen über der heidnischen Feste: mein Herz jagt es mir, mein Schwert und der Drang nach That und Todesrache. Sage mir, Du kluge Jungfrau, woher der Geist Dir kam, der unheimlich in dem jugendlichen Frauenherzen, zur That Dich trieb, vor der wohl manchen Manns Blut erbebt. Reich ist der Juden Geschichte an Wundern; aber daß ein Mähligin des Stahles, sowie Du sich beidest, ist noch nicht gehört worden. Du nanntest Dich Rahel, eines Bürger in Jerusalem; Dein Vater muß ein Held sein, da solcher Feldennuth Dir innewohnt.

Adonai, antwortete Rahel mit sanfter Stimme, Deine Magd muß ob des Lobes aus Deinem Munde erröthen. Warum rechnest Du mir eines zu so großem Verdienste an, da Deiner Großthaten Ruf schon jetzt, nach so kurzer Zeit, alle Welt erfüllt?

Judas fuhr auf; ein Rascheln in seiner Nähe schenkte den Feindbösen Empor, und blitzschnell zuckte die riesenstarke Rechte das treue Schwert.

Rahel! künftige es vom Boden empor. Ich bin's, Ger, der Moir.

Du bist schon hier? Bei meiner Mutter Grab, ich meinte Dich in weiter Ferne! Sind Deine Glieder Stahl? Deine Gelenke schmiediger Pfeilbogen Broden?

Nachdem Du fortgezogen warst, berichtete Ger, trieb's mich, auf Kundschaft auszugehen. Sonder Arg ließen die von Bacchopolis mich ein: ein Moir ist ja nicht Juh!

Ich aber spähet des Orts Gelegenheit aus, und da ich die Mauer überstieg, die zur Ebene führt, trug der Sinn mir zu, Du künftest nicht weit sein, Herr. Da ich den Sprung gethan, die Mauer hinter mir hütete, legte ich das Ohr an den Boden und wahrlich, vieler Männer Schritt vernahm ich, auch die Richtung, in der waren, verkündete der Fußstrom.

Ich hurtig auf, durchmaß die Ebene in freudbegehrten Lauf und so bin ich hier, das Gehehe Dir zu künden.

In kurzer Zeit hatte Ger die nötigen Mittheilungen gemacht: Judas freute sich derselben und ordnete an, daß Rahel und Laia in Ger's Obhut den Ausgang auf dem Lagerplatz erwarten sollten. Rahel aber bat mit schmeichelnder Stimme, die Gefahr mit den Jähren theilen zu dürfen.

Gott verhöte, rief Judas, daß Du in das Gemenge Dich wagtest! Ein Anderes ist es, den Einzelnen zu fassen, als im nächtlichen Ueberfall der verzweifeltsten Nothwehr der Vielen sich bloßzustellen. Das kannst Du nicht, Mädchen. Da heißt es, nach allen Seiten den Todesstreich führen, den Wüthen gleich da und dorthin mordend zucken, damit die eigene Brust unverletzt bleibe. Das ist Manuere, für Weiber ist es nicht.

Ich beschwore Dich, laß mich mit Dir ziehen! Dein Name wird ewig leben in unserm Volks Gedächtnis; vielleicht wird mein mit dem Deinen genannt.

Thörichtes Verlangen! Denkst Du, der Ruhm sei leicht zu pflücken gleich den Blüthen des Vorbergs? Und wer sagt Dir denn, daß mich der Tod nicht ereile, ehe ich meinen Namen für die Ewigkeit gereift? Kühnheit allein reicht dazu nicht aus; beharrlich muß man den blutigen Pfad verfolgen, stark gerüstet sein durch lange Jahre der strengsten Übung.

So soll ich feig in der Ferne Euren Schlachtruf hören?

Bete für unserer Waffen Glück — das ist dein Beruf und dein Verdienst.

Weiber mögen beten — Männer müssen schlagen!

Was soll das? — Du bist Weib!

Die Liebe hat mich weiblich gezeichnet — Was muß ich hören?

Rahel war sich ihm zu Füßen.

Höre mich und richte! — Nur du — bei dem Gott meines Volkes! — bist meines Vertrauens unumschränkter Herr! — Hinweg, treuer Ger; was ich mit dem Geliebten habe, will sonder Zeugen besprochen sein; ist's geschehen, dann magst du die Wahrheit meiner Worte bezeugen.

Sonderbar, sagte Judas und stützte das Kinn auf den Schwertgriff.

Mein Vater, begann Rahel, betreibt ein Geschäft, das mit den Thuren Meinung nicht übereinstimmt, und es ist leider ein fluchwürdiges; denn den Menschen seiner Menschenwürde zu entreißen, ist —

Ha, ich kenne das! Du schlägst die rechte Seite an, die in meiner Brust Alles überläßt! Verrathene, verkaufte, entristete Menschenwürde! Sei's ein Vater, der sie seinem Sohn entreißt! Sei's der Grieche, der dem Juden sie freit macht, verflucht will ich sein, wenn ich's dulde!

Judas stand da in seiner ganzen Feldengröße, sein Auge flammte. Er trat auf die angebliche Rahel zu.

Du bist ein Knabe, ein jüdischer Knabe, und ich finde dich in Weibergewändern! Geförst du zu denen, die die Koden sich falben, auf offenem Markt die Sinnelust zu reizen, der Griechen schändliche Sitte folgend? — Wärrst du ein solcher Bube, nicht lebend kämst du von dieser Stelle!

Der Jüngling warf sich ihm zu Füßen.

Herr, schone meines Lebens! Meines Vaters schändliches Geschäft — unfähliche Liebe brachte mich in die Verleumdung, aber nimmst du mich auf, so will ich der Reine sein für's ganze Leben. Siehe, Herr und Fürst, ich habe den Griechen, wie ich Laia liebe, ich glühe für meines Volkes Freiheit, und daß ich der Waffe mächtig bin, dafür zeugt der Erschlagene Chaitotas!

Bei dem Gott meiner Väter, sprach Judas, das Maffabäus langsam und bedächtig, ein wunderbarer Knabe! Reich mir die Hand — wie jart sie ist! Der Gott Israels stärke sie! — Wärrst du mein Waffenbruder sein?

Du wollest den schwachen Knaben in deinem riesenstarken Arme halten?

Was ich gesagt, das soll ich treu bewahren; so hart der Stahl meines Schwertes — so fest mein Wort.

Adonai, ich bin dein!

Hinweg denn, mit dem weiblichen Brunt. Umgürte dich mit dem Schwerte, sei Mann.

Ich bin's! rief der Knabe, und plötzlich stand er da in voller Jünglingsgröße. Welches Rinnen, von einem glühenden Gürtel gehalten, bedeckte die Brust und fiel bis auf die schlanken Ärmel herab. Die wallenden Röden senkten sich auf den marmrigen Nacken.

Hier, sprach Judas Maffabäus. Nimm dieses Schwert, es weiche von dir nur mit deinem Leben!

Der Jüngling griff darnach mit beiden Händen, berührte den Stahl mit seinen glühenden Rippen, dann legte er die beiden er-hen Finger seiner Hand darauf und sprach wunderbar erregt: Hier schwöre ich im Angesichte des Himmels, daß ich dir treu sein will bis in den Tod! Ich schwöre, für die Errettung meines Volkes mein Herzblut darzugeben und durch Ströme Feindesbluts in die Arme derjenigen zu fliegen, die mein Herz sich erkoren, und du, o Herr Israels, fühlst gesund, wollest mir sie geben!

Stammend betrachtete Judas Maffabäus den Jüngling und sprach vor sich hin: Das ist wahrlich der Liebe Allgewalt, jene göttliche Flamme, von der das hohe Lied und künden. So lange noch Herzen meines Volkes von ihr entbrennen, ist nichts verloren; aus dem Staube richtet es sich wieder empor, eine junge Eder, nur vom Sturm egebeugt. — Auf denn, meine Getreuen! rief er über die Schläfer hin, der Morgen naht zu neuem Thronruf! Saif Ben Thur, tritt näher, führe dein Tochterlein zu mir, ich habe ihr und dir ein Glück zu künden. Seht diesen Jüngling, erkennet ihr ihn?

Rahel! rief Laia, Rahel mit dem Schwert umgürtet?

Was soll das werden? fragte Saif Ben Thur.

Der Jüngling lag zu seinen Füßen und flehete: Vater meiner Laia, mein Lebensglück liegt in deiner Hand, deine Laia will ich mir erwerben, doch nicht eher führe ich als Weib sie heim, bis ich ihre Mutter ausgefunden.

Ich liebe Laia — sie liebt mich! Drum versprich sie mir, mein Vater, in Gegenwart des Fürsten und gottgläubiger Juden.

Ist es jetzt an der Zeit, fragte Saif Ben Thur, an den hochzeitlichen Reigen zu denken, da noch dieser Boden vom Blute der Feinde ranzt?

Judas Maffabäus trat dazwischen. Versprich ihm dein Kind, Saif Ben Thur. Wahre Liebe erzeugt Verstand.

Ich verehere dich, Herr, und dein Wort, frag du das Mädchen, ob's ihm angehören wolle, für das Leben.

Wohl nimmer hatte in diesem Thalgrunde ein ähnliches Begehrt sich zugetragen, und Aller Herzen theilhaftig lag an dem Entzücken des jugendlichen Paares. Da erhob Judas Maffabäus seine Stimme und sang dem weißen Könige nach:

Er ist kommen Zur Braut der Frommen, Da taum erglommen Das Morgenroth.

Mit dem Tod Und der Noth Hat Gott gefandt Der Herzen Band.

Brich denn die Mythen, Knabe, Mit Seim und seinem Honig laß Die süße Braut.

Du hast sie erschaut Vom Morgen behaut, Beut ihr Milch und Wein für's Leben Wollest ihr geben Die süßesten Nektar Ihre Seele labend Bis zum Lebensabend; Und du, lieb Mädchenlein, Schlich in des Herzenskrein Den theuren Freund dir ein, Genß aus der Liebe Spenden. Niemals von ihm mag wenden Sich deine Seele Und sonder Fehle, Du süße Taube, Walte der Glaube An Lieb und Treue, Denn auf's Neue Wird Zion wieder glänzen, Der Jungfrau'n Chor Sich das Paar bekränzen.

Zum Hochaltar Neigt sich dar Der Frommen Schaar; Freudopfer flammen, Ich führ' Euch mitflammen Zum bauenden Glück.

Euer Dankesbild Erhebe sich zu dem Herrn droben; Ganz Israel wird ihm danken Und ihn loben. — Amen!

Alle riefen: Amen, Amen, Amen!

Siebenes Capitel.

In jenen Hallen, die einst den Knaben Jai's umfingen, wo seine Ritterknecht ihn umstand, der Stolz der jüdischen Nation, da irrte jetzt der Schritt eines treulosen Griechen; denn die Schmach war eingezogen in David's Burg. Das Ungewohnte war geschehen. Das edelste Weib — Waila, die treuliebende Gattin und Mutter, hatten die Schergen des Kallistides dahingeführt.

Aber baue nur Einer darauf, daß die wahre Tugend verblüme; weide sich Einer an dem Gedanken, Gewalt könne Tugend besiegen! Bald wird er erkennen, wie verächtlich und klein er einem schwachen, aber edeln Weibe gegenüberstehe! Kallistides, der Frauenräuber, hielt die Gattin des Juden gleich einer Königin, hatte ihr sogar die Medianterin Dagor zu ausschließlicher Dienste vergönnt. Was Jerusalem bieten konnte, und des Griechen erfindende Pracht das befehlt der königliche Hauptmann für sie. Aber Waila verschmähte die verworfene Liebesgötze. Sie raufte das schöne Haar und schlug in tiefsten Schmerzen den Busen. Die Medianterin saß zu ihren Füßen, zerfloßen in Thränen.

Jebida, weine nicht, flehte sie, schone deiner Augen Licht; die droht keine Gefahr. Schweig, und laß mich gewahren, und meinem Schmerz!

Höre mich, Gebieterin — Nichts will ich hören, da meines Lebens Licht und Stern mir entrisen ist, Verzweiflung taufendbüßig mich umgibt und des jüdischen Volkes Schmach in mir sich barte.

Schmach, Herrin? Erkenne doch an mir wie du dich kammst bewahren — Treue Dagor, du kennst nicht die Welt — wir leben ein doppeltes Leben! Der größere Theil desselben liegt in der Menschen Meinung. Kann ich des Kummers bösen Dorn bannen? Kann ich Jerusalem erzählen, daß ich meine Frauenehre streng bewahrt? Mit Wähe muß ich mein Haupt bestreuen, mit grauem Rinnen meinen Leib bekleiden; denn schmerzlicher als Tod ist Schmach des Weibes.
